

Changes in the payment for article publishing

Announcement

Physiological Research, as many other Open-Access journals, is highly dependent on the financial support provided by the authors of published articles. The Editors and the Editorial Board of Physiological Research have therefore decided to increase the page charge to 50 EUR per printed page for each article except of review articles which will be charged 25 EUR per printed page only. The new page charges will be required for the articles to be published in 2015.

The accepted papers will not appear as preprints on our website (and in other databases) and they will not be sent to printing office unless the appropriate page charge will be received. The respective amount will be indicated in the letter announcing manuscript acceptance.
