

Why is it so hard (to design ligands to bind to proteins)?

George M. Whitesides

Department of Chemistry and Chemical Biology, Harvard University, Cambridge, Massachusetts, USA

This talk is a mixture of experimental work and more general discussion focusing on why it is so difficult to design ligands to fit protein receptors, and how we should go about analyzing molecular recognition in aqueous solution.