Annotation:

This talk will outline the legal situation in England and Wales regarding searching for archaeology, with specific reference to metal-detecting.

Outlined will be the definition of Treasure in England, Wales and Northern Ireland.

Also, the work of the Portable Antiquities Scheme - a project to record archaeological objects and coins found by the public – will be presented.

Highlighted will be how this situation has advanced knowledge and the museum acquisition of important archaeological finds.

Project - Portable Antiquity Scheme - is running since 1998.

Dr. Michael Lewis is the Head Deputy of this world largest, legal database of archaeological finds mostly collected with use of metal detectors.
