Globalization and Voting Behaviour in Western Europe

November 5, 2019
16:00 – 18:00

CERGE-EI

Politických vězňů 7, Prague 1

WELCOME:

Dominik Furgler | Ambassador, Embassy of Switzerland in the Czech Republic

Jan Švejnar | Director, IDEA at CERGE-EI

KEYNOTE SPEAKER:

Josef Zweimüller | Professor of Economics, University of Zurich

Voting behavior in Western Europe has changed dramatically since the early 1990s. Right wing populism is on the rise and traditional social democracy may be on the verge of collapse. Globalization, bringing more immigration and import competition from low-wage countries is a major driver of voting outcomes. The weakening of social democracy and the rise of right-wing populism are closely associated with increased migration and de-industrialization across countries and regions within countries.

Light refreshments will be served following the event to enable informal post-event discussion of participants. Register by e-mail to idea@cerge-ei.cz or by filling out this form:
