Institute of Physiology of the Czech Academy of Sciences (IPHYS) is one of the leading biomedical research institutions in the fields of neuroscience, metabolism and cardiovascular physiology in the Czech Republic. Our research paves the road to novel diagnostic and therapeutic procedures tackling serious medical conditions in humans including autism spectrum disorder, epilepsy, Alzheimer's disease, stroke, ischemic heart disease, diabetes or inherited metabolic disorders. Moreover, IPHYS holds an important role in the education of undergraduate and graduate students and health care workers..

PhD program at IPHYS – main features and advantages:

- Cutting edge research at molecular to systemic level
- International environment
- Flat-rate university stipend and up to full-time salary and benefits
- Close collaboration with leading clinical institutions
- Participation on PhD student conferences
- Work in the modern campus with on-site accommodation, and sports facilities
